

biota wine

““its just good juice” is exactly how a friend once described his wine; and that’s just what we hope we’ve provided for you. wines with texture, taste, structure and appeal; classic regional styles, new emerging varieties and wines slightly askew; chosen to highlight our food and surrounds, but mostly just to be enjoyed. like our palates, wines are distinctly different and constantly evolving, and so this wine list will always be a work in progress; but that’s what makes it interesting – enjoy the juice. ””

The Southern Highlands Wine Region

Tertini Wines

Already producing outstanding Riesling and Pinot Noir, Tertini Wines is a rising star in the Southern Highlands. First planted in 2000, the Yaraandoo Vineyard is located near the village of Berrima, a cool climate region, at an altitude of 715 meters.

Like many small boutique vineyards the vines are cropped low, hand pruned and hand picked, with an emphasis upon terroir. Warm days and cool nights create a slow ripening period, leading towards high natural acidity, and intense aromatics. Riesling is already a star, with intense citrus fruits and minerality dominating a long lean palate, while the pinot is beautifully expressive on the nose, with great acid and tannin structure aligning it perfectly with food.

Pulpit Rock Estate

The 4 Ha Pulpit Rock Estate Vineyard was established in 1998. At an elevation of over 700m, nights are cool even in summer, while spring and autumn conditions are long and mild.

Fruit is hand picked, with the chardonnay whole bunch pressed and around 30% of the pinot likewise, both wines then see around 30% new French oak, creating big, rich wines that express their place of origin through expressive aromatics, depth of flavour and fine acid lines. The wines of Pulpit Rock are already gathering a reputation for longevity, and their release with a number of years age upon them is an added bonus, providing, rich complex palates and secondary characters.
